THINGS TO DO

Târnavia Mare offers the best opportunity to see an authentic European landscape still alive and working - rich cultural and natural heritage in harmony. There are many ways you can explore the area and its richness, and meet local food and craft producers. Of the following you can arrange to do with the Tourist Information Center/Târnavia Mare Tourist Association (contact details below):

- Nature walks - specialist guides are available, especially to see the outstanding birds, butterflies and wildflowers of the area.
- Walks or horse and cart rides through woods and meadows (weather can be combined with picnic lunches at local restaurants).
- Walking and cycling routes have been established from village to village throughout the area, both long and short distances. There are numerous links for hire and guides are available.

- Traditional agriculture - throughout the summer you can see the cows milking horses in villages, horses for milking milk, meadows, weeded land, and sheep and her milking in the wilderness, and shepherds with their small white ponies with horses.
- Traditional food producers - in the hills we display local walking clubs along and walking clubs in the villages are traditional food makers of the various plants locally available. They have long been used for the different types of local honey and jam for which the area is now famous.

The Târnavia Mare area has been chosen as part of the EU's Natura 2000 network, which protects Europe's most important species and habitats. The historic landscape of the Târnavia Mare area is especially important for its abundant wildflower-rich hay meadows and pastures, oak and hornbeam forests and other habitats, which have disappeared over most of Europe. The landscape is home to many species of flowers, insects, birds and mammals that are rare in much of Europe today. The people of the area are working together to protect this biodiversity, and use it to promote local prosperity.
